

Chapter 722

Adriana was a control freak, and with her ruthlessness, the answer was obvious. Sabina felt like Adriana didn't even need to reply her.

True enough, poker-faced Adriana already had the answer displayed on her face.

"Kill? I think she's the one who's getting out herself. All I'm doing is giving her a slight push..." Adriana said nonchalantly.

She made it sound like it was as easy as crushing an ant.

Sabina understood what she meant.

"Can you do this?" Adriana raised an eyebrow.

Sabina didn't answer. She really didn't expect that the person Adriana liked would be Chuck!

What was so great about that guy?

Sabina couldn't wrap her head around it.

In her eyes, Chuck was a person who understood her, and he could even be called her bestie.

Apart from that, what other charm did he have?

Nothing at all, no?

She couldn't understand why Adriana liked Chuck, and it seemed that her feelings for him were strong.

Was she blinded by love?

Anyway, Sabina thought that Chuck apart from being able to understand her, he had nothing else going for him.

To her, Chuck was but an ordinary being. He had no appeal at all, let alone any charm to speak of.

"Can you do it or not? You promised me. And I'm warning you, if you break your promise, you won't be able to deal with the consequences!" Adriana's voice turned cold.

And this was the power of the Whitlock family's future head.

Sabina, of course, was indifferent to this.

"Can I ask, what do you like about him?"

"Love comes at us fast. You won't understand it because you haven't met someone who would make you feel like this. Anyway, it's an amazing feeling." A memory surfaced in Adriana's mind.

"Yes, I don't understand it, nor can I see any qualities of Chuck worth liking over." Sabina voiced out her honest opinions about Chuck.

"That's your business. Can you or can you not do this for me?" Adriana asked once more.

Sabina kept silent. She had to push and pressure Chuck, then convince him to go to Adriana and beg.

Was this even possible?

Chuck wasn't that type of person.

"Chuck isn't the type to beg now, is he?"

"He will if you push Karen, Yvette and Willa into a tight corner. So, whatever I tell you to do, just do it. Once Chuck comes to me and beg, I will give you all the benefits you're seeking."

"I don't want any benefits!" Sabina frowned.

"Alright, it's up to you."

"Fine, I know what to do now."

When she finished talking, Sabina turned around and left.

Adriana watched as Sabina walked further and further away.

After Sabina left, Nelson closed the door. Adriana laid on the sofa and asked, "Is Brooke dead?"

"I think...it shouldn't be long now. There was a sensor in the medicine box given to Sabina previously; it stopped emitting its signal just now. It's likely that he's dead, but it looks like Sabina doesn't know yet, and neither does anyone else." Nelson said.

"Did he die of his illness?"

"It's hard to say. I'm guessing that someone had made a move. It could've been Loomis..."

"Oh, him? That's pretty bold of him," Adriana laughed.

"It makes sense. Loomis has always been cruel and merciless. I doubt that his killing Brooke is even a big deal to him. Now that Brooke has suddenly died, what do you think of the situation now, Miss Adriana?"

"My opinion doesn't matter. The important thing is I've come up with a new idea..." Adriana smiled a bone-chilling smile.

If someone else was here, they would be very surprised. Why would such a beautiful woman have a smile as scary and villainous like that?

Nelson approached her carefully. "What is it?"

Adriana's smile grew wider and wider. Sabina seemed to be a rather good pawn...

.....

In a luxurious room of the Yeager family.

Thomson slapped Loomis straight across the face. "You bastard! He's my father, and also your grandfather!"

Brooke's lifeless body laid motionless on the bed. His eyes were wide open and his face was as pale as a ghost. It had been a while since he took his last breath.

The head of a prominent family had died!

As Brooke wheezed out his last remaining breaths, he never expected that he would die in his grandson's hands.

There were traces of dried tears on his old, wrinkled face. All tears of regret. But what was the point? He was dead.

"Dad, stop fretting over petty matters when we're on the horizon of something huge. If I become the family head, won't your position be elevated as well? What's more, Grandpa only had a few more days to live; killing him was an act of mercy because I didn't want him to suffer anymore." Loomis was in over his head. After killing Brooke, he became even more entitled and self-righteous.

He felt that the whole world belonged to him!

Hearing these words, Thomson raised his hand to land another blow on Loomis' face, but he stopped short and sighed. "B*stard! How dare you!"

"Dad, it's useless to scold me now. What's done is done. He shouldn't have gotten in my way. Wanting a woman to be the family head? He was nothing but an old fool!" Loomis shouted.

"You mean Sabina?" Thomson was shocked.

"Yes! That b*tch!"

"You didn't kill her?"

"No, but since the Yeager family is mine to control now, I will have someone sent over to kill her later," Loomis sneered.

"Are you dumb? Where the hell are you going to kill her? You should be luring her back here instead!"

Loomis patted his forehead as he realized this. "You have a point. Sabina did come to visit Grandpa, so if I were to tell her that something had happened to him, I'm sure she'd come running back here! When she's dead, no one will be a threat to me anymore! I wonder if it ever occurred to Chuck, Karen and the others that I would take this risk and get to where I am today?"

Thinking of this, Loomis laughed out loud.

He was filled with pride and arrogance.

"Didn't Chuck and Karen help you out before? They certainly wouldn't have expected you to be so bold. Even I didn't, you b*stard!"

"Dad, what's done is done. I did what I had to...forget it. Call your men over now. I'm going to lure Sabina here!" Loomis said.

"Don't mess this up!" Thomson reminded him.

"Don't worry, Dad. Leave this to me." Loomis said confidently.

Thomson immediately arranged for his men to come over. Loomis stared at Brooke with a grim expression and sneered, "Old fool, you couldn't have seen this coming, could you? Don't worry - not only am I going to be the head of the Yeager family, but I'm also going to destroy the two other hidden families! Especially that b*tch, Adriana! How dare she threaten me before? I think..."

As Loomis went on muttering to himself, he couldn't help but admit that Adriana was in fact, the woman of his dreams!

But his ideal woman had fallen for Chuck!

Thus, Loomis decided to make Adriana regret her choices.

He found Brooke's private phone that he could use to contact Sabina.

With a scheming smile plastered on his face, Loomis dialed Sabina's number.

"Sabina, don't blame me for this. If only you stayed away, then nothing would happen. I would've even let you off the hook. But since you chose to be dishonest instead, I will not show any mercy. You must die!" Loomis murmured.