

Time Travel to Become Your Sweetheart Chapter 1

Chapter 1 Don't Call the Police

It was dark, pitch dark.

When Jane woke up, she was still a little confused. She blinked her eyes, trying to adapt to the light, but it was all in vain.

Before she could do something, a voice came into her ears, "It's been four hours. There's no news from the Duncans. Will they call the police?"

"They wouldn't. If they call the police, she'll be dead. The ransom of some hundred million yuan is nothing to them."

Smirking, the boss hit the man on the head. "You're such an idiot. Just see what I do."

"But..."

"I heard that William didn't like this woman. Or, she would not, you know." The man hesitated for a moment and muttered.

The man and his boss got news that Jane was cheating. She was kidnapped and taken to an abandoned factory on the way to see her man.

Afterwards, the boss called William and asked for 300 million yuan as ransom. If they called the police, they would kill her right away. If this succeeded, they would be millionaires.

The sidekick didn't understand why his boss was so confident. The Duncans was too mysterious for him. However, he wasn't stupid. With his money, William Duncan could find a better wife. Why did he bother to spend 300 million to save his wife who was cheating on him? No person would do that.

Unless there was something wrong with William's brain.

"What can you achieve with your brain?"

The boss opened a can of beer and took a big sip before explaining to him, "They would pay the ransom because this stupid woman has good parents."

Jane's parents had worked for Colin Duncan, William's grandfather. But they both died abroad to save Colin. As a result, Jane became an orphan and Colin had been raising her ever since.

Out of both guilt and gratitude, Colin saw Jane as his own granddaughter. When Jane grew up, he made his only grandson, William, to marry her.

“Holy shit! I don’t know that!”

Knowing more, the sidekick was convinced that the Duncans would not leave her alone. After all, Jane had given birth to a son for William.

Their gossiping went on. Standing aside, they despised Jane for blowing up her good marriage by having an affair.

“You...”

Jane blinked and tugged at her hair. The pain reminded her that she wasn’t dreaming.

Before she woke up, she was in an international jewelry show as the chief designer. Something suddenly flashed and she fainted.

Next moment, she was there. And the conversation between the men was strange to her. Was she kidnapped?

However, she heard some keywords like cheating, a husband and a son. What the hell? She was still single!

Could they have the wrong person?

Just as she was thinking of a way to save herself, they talked about the Duncans and William. Jane immediately realized something.

She had become the heroine in a book that she had just read, who was material, plain and unscrupulous and had the same name with her!
