Chapter 495

Temporary Friends With Benefits Reivaj Group had always emphasized benefiting the people, so it would not sell the drug as expensive as 6-8 thousand dollars. Even if it were 300-500 dollars, it was cheap, but he would still not have enough! The patient was worried, fretting that the 150 dollars in his pocket would not even be enough for the doctor's consultation. What was more, an injection. The truth was, he had overthought because he managed to have both the consultation and was jabbed after that. When he went to pay, he even discovered that the shot only cost 80 dollars.

It was out of this world. Everyone's budget was around 700 dollars, and he had only brought 150 dollars in cash because he was poor. Yet, one injection only cost 80 dollars. He could not help muttering in wonder if the medication was fake.

Still, the drug was no heavenly pill. Whether it was effective or not would not show an immediate result. According to the doctor, the patient could only go home and wait to check the efficacy after half a month, despite his murmur.

Dear almighty, it was magical!

There was no need for half a month. The patient found his skin turning fairer from the redness one week later. Once half a month was up, he looked like a regular person without the condition. There was no difference. Others could not have guessed that he had psoriasis. The villager patient was overjoyed, showering praises with a thumbs up no matter who he saw. "The medicine from Reivaj Group is freaking amazing. It's effective!"

This was only coming from him. The response from society, in general, was even more fervent!

Many patients with the skin condition had been skeptical like the villager patient was when the vaccine was first produced. They might not have purchased it if it had not been for Reivaj Group's reputation.

There was even an expert who had appeared on television and expressed how impossible a vaccine was in his interviews, Said expert had confidently added "absolutely" before his "impossible", claiming that it was absolutely impossible such a vaccine could be invented.

"In my opinion, it'd be the foreigners who came up with the vaccine even if the vaccine managed to be invented,"

The expert had been drowned in curses and insults the day the program was broadcast since he was a typical case of the grass always being greener on the other side.

Despite that everyone had kept quiet about the vaccine in tacit understanding. After all, they had been doubtful. They would have opened fire in critiques and comments if it were not for Rewaj Group's prestige and reputation

After around half a month of the drug entering the market, though, everything changed.

All sorts of positive feedback took over the mainstream medical market while franchised pharmacies and hospitals bought the vaccine in bulk In Doug's words, they had such a worryingly high number of orders that he did not want to take more Those in charge of receiving orders did not even have time to sleep

Busy! They were so busy. The efficacy brought along high sales, and the manufacturing plant got busy. Working back to back was already the basic state. Doug had even suggested they should acquire another drug manufacturing plant and speed up the production.

It was then Javier brought up a suggestion no one had ever imagined.

“Pick a national medicine manufacturing plant and share the vaccine production plan and the formula with them on terms.”

Sharing on terms was a rip-off. It was more or less the other party selling something for 80 dollars and them making 30 dollars. It was just that everyone did not understand why they would cut the pie and give it to others when it was money they could monopolize. Doug told Javier privately, “Boss, we could earn this on our own. You can pick another way if you want to show your patriotism!”

Doug thought Javier was merely a patriot, but the latter was obviously not.

“Patriotism is just one of the things, More importantly, you have to remember there’s no wealth in the world that one person can monopolize. No matter how strong you are, there will be stronger forces than you. Even if you’re Sammius, you have China and Soroy working tranther ha ficht vau
